FOREWORD

"Now everybody smile - that's nice - hold it! - - another please - someone moved." And so goes the life of a photographer. In our attempt to show you the students and activities of this year through the eye of the camera, there has been extra work for the photographers and less for the writers. On a few pages you will find a new type of mounting, photo-montage, to add to the variety of the 1939 Hi-Life.

In this issue our theme is in observance of Washington's Centennial. As you look through the pages, think of Washington and its school one hundred years ago.

CLAUDE TUCKER

Mr. E. A. Ralston has proved his competence in his four years as Superintendent of Schools. He has taken an active interest in promoting the present grade school building program and has shown a general enthusiasm for all high school activities.

His decisive manner, his energetic nature, and his ringing laughter have found favor with the students and teachers of Washington Public Schools.

In his first year as principal of Washington High School, Mr. George Fields has introduced some changes, as starting a new home room system and organizing a student assembly. He has also tried to create an interest in student participation in school activities.

His intelligence, his ability to understand, and his sense of humor have made him well liked by the faculty and student body.

The Challenge of American Life—Dr. H. J. Thornton, State University of Iowa

HOME ROOMS

This year, with the coming of our new principal, Mr. Fields, we have a new system. Every morning from 8:45 to 9:05 each student goes to his home room. During this brief period the announcements are made, and every week a different program is sent from the office to be read and discussed. Many helpful and interesting ideas and facts are presented to the students for their thought and consideration. The discussion generally proves entertaining and revealing, giving the students a chance to voice their own opinions.

Some of the bulletins during the year included discussions on fallacies, propaganda, punctuality, voting, honesty, self-analysis, companionship, personality, and manners.

During the year the home rooms held parties and picnics either singly or in combination with other groups, thus creating better fellowship by bringing students together who would not be in contact otherwise.

CLASSES AT WORK

"Oh, say! can you see—" the high school band softly plays as the student body sings—a moment's silence—a cannon booms—the town clock strikes eleven—the flag is at half-mast—and another Armistice Day is observed—a symbol of Freedom and Democracy and Liberty, never-to-be forgotten by American Youth.

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace." (Isaiah 9:6)—"Joy to the world! the Lord is come!" "The Nativity," a frieze, presented by the musical department of the high school, by solo and group singing, brought to the hearts of the people the story of the Redeemer's birth, and new hope to mankind.

If a straight line is shorter than a crooked one and we want the shortest possible distance from x to c, we use the crooked one—ah, shucks!—but regardless of the puzzled expression upon the countenance of each member of the mechanical drawing class, we don't wonder but what they would still know a good deal more about machines and their structure than we will ever learn.

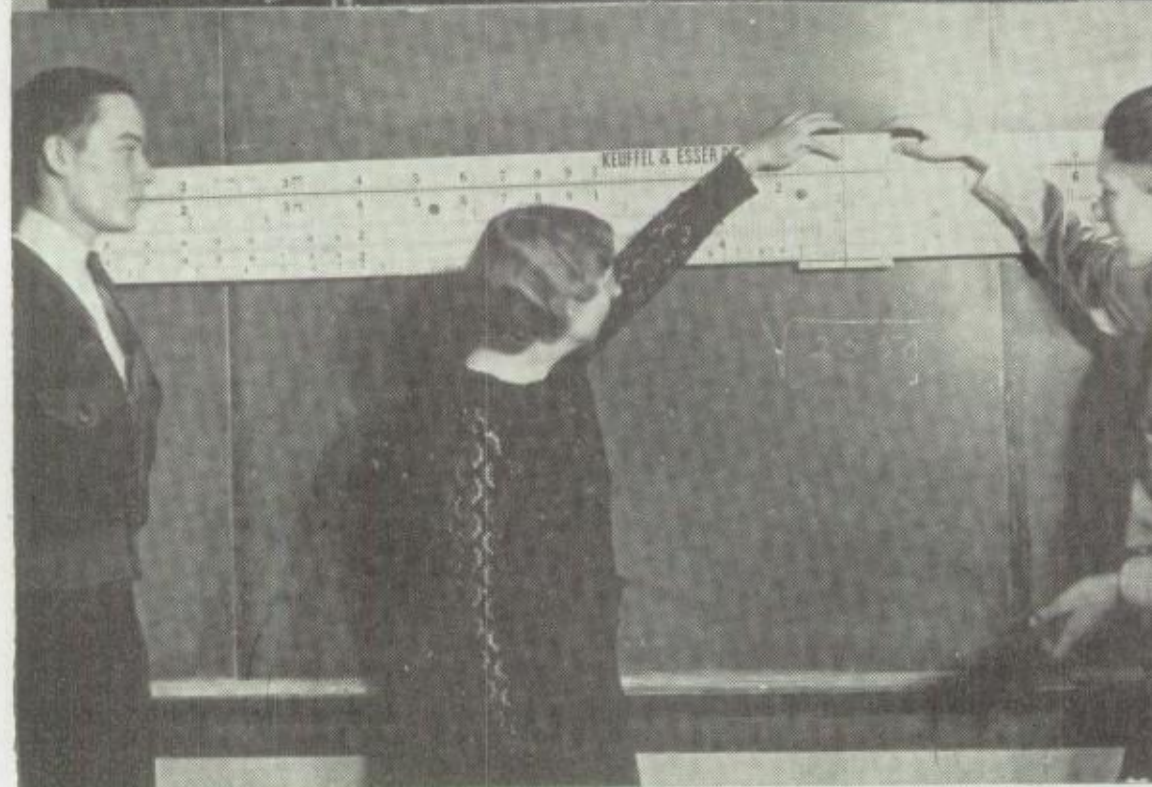

"So-o-o whistle while you work! Tra-la, la-la-la-la!" Energy, optimistic vitality, and true merry dispositions help to make polishing and cleaning furniture a pleasant task. The home economics department, under direction of Miss Grace Randell has as its project this year the decorating and furnishing the girls' rest room. Needles, thread, pins, scissors, mending cotton, new linoleum, chairs, cot, desk, table, new curtains, and of course, girls, a mirror!

Radio—a marvel of the ages, and a joy to any boy, was explained to the sophomore English class, and proved to be exceptionally interesting to even the none-too-mechanically inclined girls. Nobody knows everything. Therefore, there is always something to learn. A demonstration, given by each student, is one way of accomplishing this aim. Of course, there are other things to be done; including the study of the adventures of Odysseus, Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," and by all means, grammar.

Angles and triangles—straight lines and circles dance among the cobwebs of the geometrically-inclined student's mind—the slide rule continues to give its equations correctly—and mathematics marches merrily on through the years at W. H. S.

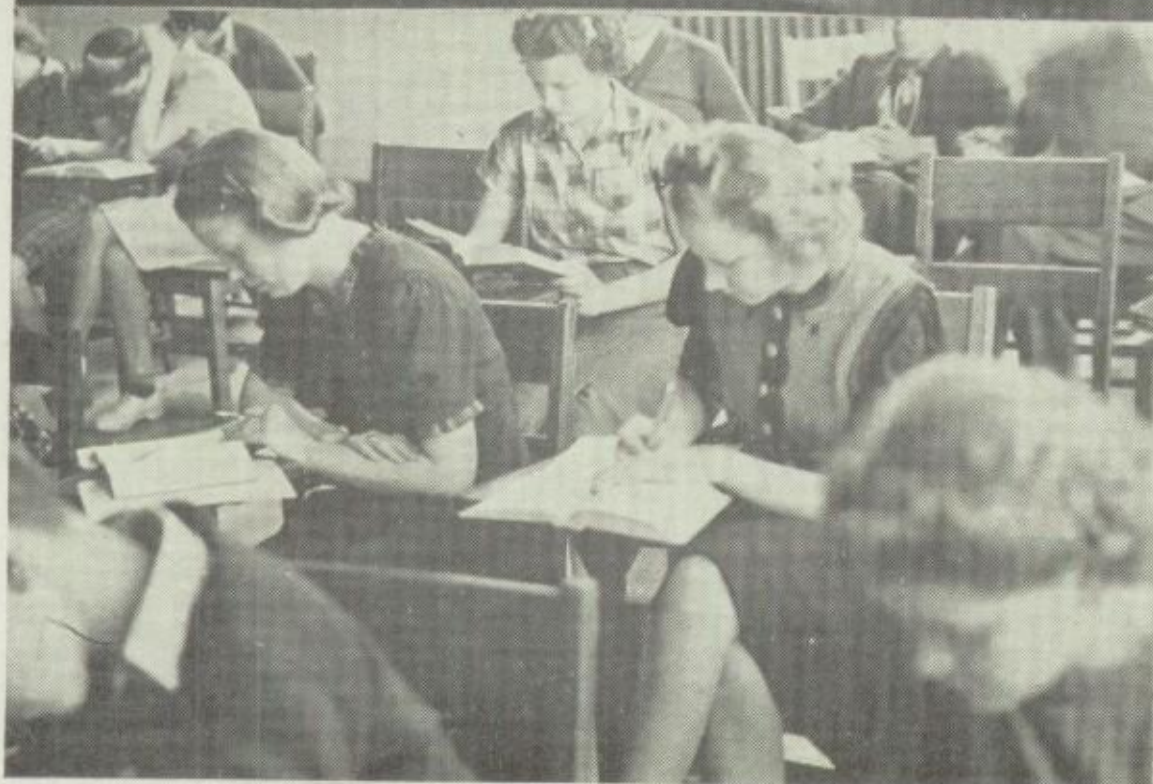

Physics is reasoning with nature. These scientific students are studying the fundamentals of matter and molecules, mechanics, motion, gravitation, energy, and many other forces. One problem—four minds—and a solution—maybe!

Question number 97—and another government test is in the making—"bless your buttons," if you won't be glad you know something of how the affairs of the nation are managed. City, county, state and national organization is discussed, and seniors are prepared to go forth into the world as better citizens.

"The present—a repetition of the past." Dealing wisely with current social and political problems necessitates a well-rounded and accurate knowledge of history. For this reason, all students are required to study this subject before graduation, thus fitting them for the future, when the destiny of a great nation rests in their hands.

Hands—that so often reveal a person's character—are shown at work in the biology laboratory. We wonder what the hands of Lister and Pasteur were like. Are these the fingers of some future scientist, or merely those of a student whose present interest lies in the discovery of the intricate and more delicate—yet majestically beautiful part of God's great and vast creation?

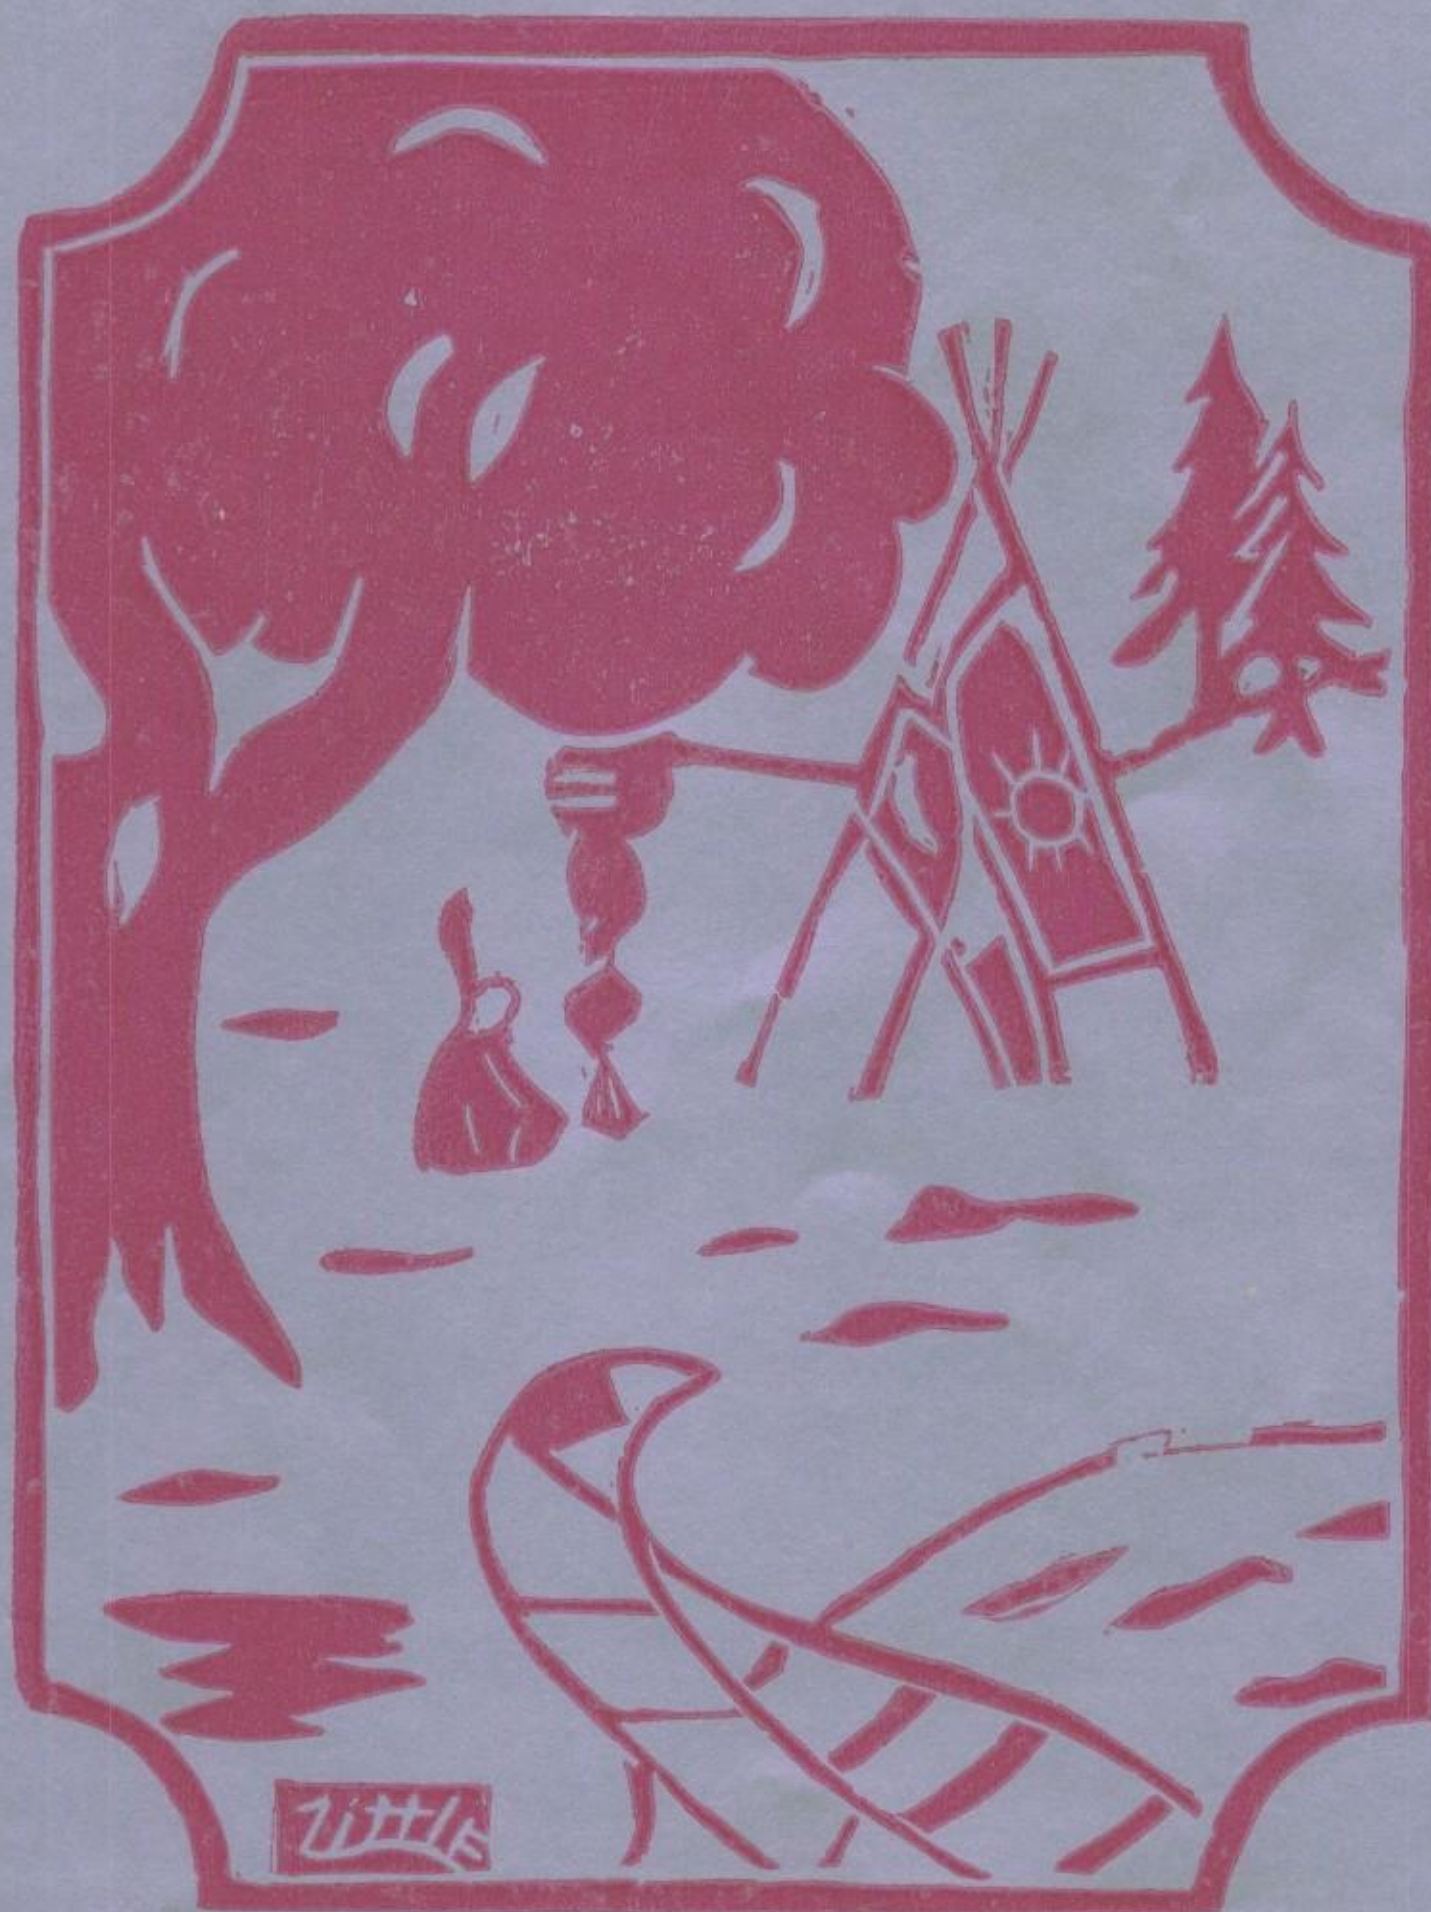

"Books are the food of youth and the delight of old age."—Cicero. The Washington High School Library is equipped with books of unusual quality, many volumes being donated by the Carnegie Fund, which was presented to the Junior College for this purpose. Current magazines concerning educational and recreational topics are always to be found upon the shelves—that is, unless everyone is reading them.

Gaul—is divided—in—three—parts; -er-ah, who can translate Latin, anyway? Many a student, while vainly striving to conjugate a verb, and wondering why he took the course, finds to his surprise a sudden ascending of his English grades, a better understanding of the English vocabulary, and a more broadened knowledge of ancient Roman history. Besides, Latin, like other subjects, is not difficult if you study—that is, for some people.

FOOTBALL

Washington High School had the honor this year of having one of its members, Charles Snyder, placed on the First All State team. Charles Snyder played tackle on this year's eleven and is the first boy from Washington ever to be named on the All State team. The school was fortunate in having Fred Maasdam to step into the position of head coach when George Freshwaters left last year. During the past year Coach Maasdam has brought Washington up from the lower ranks in the Little Six conference and has a very promising group of boys for next year's team. One of the things he has stressed the past year is trick plays to throw the defense off guard. In the lower picture may be seen the line formation of the Washington Eleven. George Mohr was assistant coach.

Dick Knupp, Bill Brown, Carl Klein, headlines.

COMMERCIAL CLUB

In our Commercial Club, students are given the opportunity to hear what business men want when they hire workers, as well as the opportunity to enjoy their work. Miss Della Patton and Mr. Ralph Le Moine are capable and helpful advisers. With the help of the officers, Robert Masson, president, Phyllis Crane, vice president, Lucille Murphy, secretary and treasurer, and Mildred Anderson, reporter, the club takes a necessary part in school activities.

TYPING CLASSES

Tap!—tap, tap—tap! Accuracy and speed in typing are as essential to a stenographer as books to the librarian. Quick, clear thinking and the ability to act accordingly make a capable secretary. Constant practice and patience are requisites for commercial work. Many students who do not care to go into professional work have nevertheless taken typing to help them with other jobs or as a general aid to correspondence. It will also help those who intend to go to college, for it promotes neatness and accuracy in school work.

Junior College . . .

Harland Mead has been dean of Washington Junior College since it was instituted in 1927 and has rendered untiring and efficient service to all those students and faculty members with whom he has worked.

He has had foresight into the progress and advance of education and has initiated those things that are new and worthwhile in the educational field.

For his ability as instructor, his understanding of the problems of young people in college, and his enthusiastic helpfulness and ceaseless effort to bring college opportunities to more young people in the surrounding communities, the students and his associates are grateful.
